PRESS RELEASE

Celadon Glaze Ceramics

The term celadon was first used by Europeans when porcelain appeared in France in the 17th century. Celadon ceramics were originally produced in Longquan city, Zhejiang, China over 1100 years ago. Although the colors of celadon glaze vary, the name is associated with the pottery's pale jade-green glaze. Most of Down To Earth's celadon is embossed with a Koi goldfish motif. Down To Earth offers many pieces with the Koi design such as teapots, teacups, plates, bowls and chopstick rests.
